WELCOME

A New Dawn for Global Human Leadership: Planting Seeds of Vision and Cultivating Generations of Change

It is with both profound humility and soaring hope that I celebrate the birth of the Graduate School of Global Maestro Human Management—an institution not merely conceived, but called into being by the urgent needs of our world and the timeless dreams of our shared humanity. At Midwest University, we have long held the conviction that education is not simply the transmission of knowledge—it is the creation of destiny. Today, that destiny begins anew.

The Global Maestro program rises on a grand vision: to awaken and equip a new class of human-centered leaders who possess not only strategic brilliance, but moral imagination; who lead with compassion, yet act with power; who build not empires, but legacies of purpose across borders, sectors, and generations.

This graduate school is more than a response to global trends—it is a blueprint for the future of leadership itself. We stand at a threshold where technology accelerates, but meaning lags behind. It is in this moment that we must return to the essence of leadership: not just to manage, but to elevate; not just to grow, but to heal.

With world-renowned faculty, immersive global field experiences, and a curriculum rooted in emotional intelligence, ethical vision, and humanistic depth, this program carries the DNA of what the future demands: leaders who think globally, act ethically, and serve meaningfully.

As President, I dream not only of what our students will become, but of the world they will transform. From boardrooms to ministries, from rural communities to international halls of diplomacy, I see Global Maestros orchestrating change—quietly, wisely, powerfully.

Let this be the beginning of a global movement. Let this school be a light on the hill. And let every learner who enters this journey become a conductor of the world we dare to imagine.

Welcome to the next great chapter of Midwest University—and of humanity itself.

Diplomacy of the Heart: Reimagining Global Leadership for a Shared Humanity

H.E. Irina Georgieva Bokova

10th Director-General of UNESCO
Honorary International Dean,
G.S. of Global Maestro Human
Management

Throughout my Journey in international diplomacy—as Director—General of UNESCO Bulgaria’s Minister of Foreign Affairs, and as Ambassador—I learned a fundamental truth: leadership, at its highest form, is an act of profound humanity. Today, as we celebrate the inauguration of the Graduate School of Global Maestro Human Management at Midwest University, I see this essential truth beautifully realized.

In our increasingly interconnected yet deeply fragmented world, the role of leaders has never been more crucial nor their responsibilities greater. Diplomacy, whether among nations or within organizations, requires more than strategic skill. It calls for empathy, emotional intelligence, cultural sensitivity, and an unwavering commitment to dialogue and mutual understanding.

The Global Maestro Human Management program is not just an educational initiative—it is a visionary response to the urgent global need for human-centered leadership. It embraces diplomacy of the heart, fostering leaders who understand that authentic authority emerges from compassion, collaboration, and moral clarity.

This school will cultivate leaders who are not merely skilled negotiators, but who embody diplomatic grace; leaders who unite diverse voices, bridge divides, and build resilient, inclusive, and peaceful societies. It is here that the leaders of tomorrow will learn to listen deeply, speak thoughtfully, and act decisively for the greater global good.

As Honorary International Dean, I am deeply honored to support this groundbreaking journey. Together, let us nurture global maestros who elevate leadership beyond politics and power, who practice diplomacy as an expression of our shared humanity, and who lead the world forward with wisdom, courage, and compassion.

Igniting the Light of Lifelong Awakening : Answering Humanity’s Call with Courage, Conviction, and Compassion

Dr. Un Shil Choi, Ph.D., DBA

Dean, Graduate School of Global Maestro Human
Management

There are journeys we take in life that redefine not only what we do, but who we become. Today, we stand at the threshold of such a journey—a profound awakening that begins not in the lecture hall, but in the deepest chambers of our humanity.

Throughout my life as an educator and scholar of lifelong learning and sustainable governance, I have come to understand that true education does not merely instruct—it ignites. It awakens something powerful and sacred within each of us: the boundless potential to change ourselves, our communities, and our world.

The Graduate School of Global Maestro Human Management represents the convergence of this lifelong passion and urgent global responsibility. It is a call to those who refuse to manage without meaning, who dare to lead with both mind and soul. Here, education is not passive—it is fiercely alive, demanding your courage, sharpening your conviction, and deepening your compassion.

Our purpose is clear: we cultivate leaders who hold not just positions, but visions; who are stewards not just of companies, but of the planet itself. Through this program, you will become a global maestro—not simply by mastering the world around you, but by first mastering the world within you.

As your Dean, I invite you to step boldly into this luminous path. Awaken the leader you were always meant to be—a leader who lives with intention, governs with wisdom, and acts with ethical courage. Let your journey here transform your life, and through you, transform countless others.

Together, let us illuminate the future—not merely by achieving excellence, but by embodying greatness.

Your true learning begins now.

A Quiet Invitation to Wisdom: Illuminating the Path Where Humanity Meets Itself

Dr. Jae-Sup Pak

International-Dean, Graduate
School of Global Maestro
Human Management Midwest
University, USA

In the gentle stillness of contemplation, we hear truths that the world’s noise often drowns out. Such truths—the quiet, timeless whispers of wisdom—guide us to remember who we truly are, and who we might yet become.

The Graduate School of Global Maestro Human Management emerges as this quiet invitation: not to seek mere answers, but to live profound questions. It is a sanctuary where the Eastern virtue of humility and the Western spirit of inquiry merge into a harmonious dance, where silence speaks louder than words, and listening transforms more deeply than telling.

Having dedicated my life to the study and embodiment of Oriental wisdom, I believe the future of humanity lies not in dominance, but in resonance—not in division, but in connection. True leadership, therefore, begins not from authority, but from self-understanding; not from power, but from presence; not from asserting, but from attuning.

Global Maestro is more than an academic program; it is a spiritual homecoming. Here we learn to lead by becoming fully human, to manage by first mastering our own hearts and minds. As you step into this journey, I invite you to meet yourself deeply, to cross the boundaries of culture and consciousness, and to uncover our unique harmony within the greater symphony of humankind.

May your days here be illuminated by insight and humility. May your studies become meditations, and your life become your message. Above all, may you discover in this quiet invitation the profound joy of wisdom realized. Welcome home, to the wisdom that has always awaited you.

MBA & DBA in Global Maestro Human Management

Program Purpose

The MBA and DBA programs in Global Maestro Human Management at Midwest University are founded on a profound understanding of the rising importance of human-centered leadership and management philosophy in the era of rapid global transformation and digital disruption.

The term “Global Maestro” refers not merely to a manager or executive, but to a master level leader—a maestro—who combines exceptional expertise with deep human insight. These leaders possess the wisdom and foresight to guide organizations and societies through complexity, uncertainty, and change. This doctoral-level program values the essence of humanity, emotional depth, and the capacity for empathy. It is designed not only for emerging global leaders but also for senior executives seeking to expand their leadership influence across sectors, as well as for those envisioning sustainable personal growth beyond retirement.

Participants will systematically cultivate distinctive, human-centered leadership capabilities grounded in emotional intelligence and humanistic insight. Through this program, they will refine their life philosophy and self-leadership skills, ultimately establishing a unique leadership identity and generating lasting, sustainable value for their organizations and communities. The program empowers each individual to grow into a true Global Maestro—a transformative leader for the future of humanity.

Post-Graduation Certifications & Professional Licenses
